Pamela Jenkins ices the competition!

A REAL CUPCAKE

Pamela Jenkins used to be one of the business-suit types at the Golden Nugget casino in Las Vegas, but she hit the jackpot when she put all her chips on her baking expertise. Jenkins opened the Cupcakery in 2006 and sold 275,000 cupcakes in a single year, earning her treats a spot on AOL's list of the "Best Cupcakes in America." Stoners seem like a natural audience to savor Pamela's dreamy creations, with flavors like Boston Dream, Coconut Bliss, Southern Belle and Tickle Me Pink. The Cupcakery does all kinds of custom orders (including an erotic assortment), and her HIGH TIMES Chronic cupcakes are an achievement worthy of the Medal of Freedom. Order online at thecupcakery.com.

WEED AND WINEHOUSE

In October, British soul star Amy Winehouse was busted for pot possession while on her European tour. She and her husband were arrested in Bergen, Norway, along with another person, after Hotel Norge staff alerted cops about an illegal aroma emanating from their suite. The police turned up a quarter ounce of pot.

Arresting officers stated that Winehouse was incoherent, slurred her speech and had difficulty standing when taken into custody. But don't blame the pot: This girl digs intense intoxicants. Back in August, Winehouse collapsed, allegedly from a combo of heroin, coke, Ecstasy, horse tranquilizer and booze.

The toking trio was held overnight and released the next day after paying approximately $715 in fines. Prosecutor Lars Morten Lothe pronounced the case closed: "She's paid the fine, so this thing is over for us now."

But not for Amy. Winehouse lived up to her name the very next night, downing several glasses of champagne before taking the stage. What a trooper!

Carey carries the jay!

DREW IS THE DUDE!

Comedian Drew Carey, the new host of the The Price is Right, recently appeared in a reason.tv video which touts medical marijuana and questions the War on Drugs. In the segment, Carey forthrightly states: "I think it's clear by now that the federal government needs to reclassify marijuana. People who need it should be able to get it—safely and easily." We especially enjoyed the moment when Carey does play-by-play as he strolls into an LA dispensary: "Smell that smell. That's the smell of freedom." The video is one of 20 that Carey will host for the Reason Foundation, a nonprofit educational group.

Stoner stupid.

BRAIN-DEAD K-FED

Kevin Federline was filming a guest spot on the TV drama One Tree Hill when he openly lit up a joint on the set. A source told the New York Daily News: "He is smoking marijuana all round the set. He doesn't seem to see a need to hide it at all."

Well, K-Fed has never impressed anyone with his smarts, and even less so now, when, in the midst of a highly publicized custody battle with his ex, he chooses to light up publicly. It's stupid from a legal standpoint, unprofessional and hideously rude to the nonsmokers on set. Doesn't the Screen Actors Guild have some rules about this stuff? By the way, we've got no problem with pot-smoking parents—just pot-smoking morons.

QUOTE OF THE MONTH

San Francisco Mayor Gavin Newsom recently slammed the War on Drugs: "If you want to get serious, if you want to reduce crime by 70 percent in this country overnight, end this war on drugs," he told reporters in October. "You want to get serious—seriously serious—about crime and violence, end this War on Drugs. It's laughable that anyone could say we're really succeeding. I mean, it's comedy. This War on Drugs is an abject failure."
